Since her appearance on the TV show "THE VOICE" where Liv interpreted the song Let it be with her little chipmunk voice (26 million views on Youtube), Liv comes back with the 1st single "Two Souls in a box" from her own music band : Baret Explorers, created with Heimanù.

In this video we can see them moving around in their apartment, both confined. They carry out various activities, waiting for time to pass, to a humming tune.

This clip opens another kind of window on the serious context affecting the whole world: the covid and its confinement. In this new situation, the group proposes to look into these questions : what can we do in this quarantine ? How long can we stand trapped with somebody, even a loved one, without arguing? Are we really made to live together?

Between cooking activities, video games, or extended smartphone sessions, the activities can be varied, but the time can still pass too slowly.

To enhance the authenticity of the project, the Baret Explorers also asked these questions to their fans.

INCLUDE THE VOICES OF HIS FANS : PART OF THE BARET EXPLORERS CONCEPT

Seeing the excitement, they decided to ask fans for a 30-second audio recording of their responses. Thousands of fans answered the call, and the Baret Explorers received 2469 recordings. The band randomly selected 5 people, who were called for a special interview putting the person in a unique storytelling adventure.

As a kind of role-playing game where the interviewee is the hero of this adventure.

By evolving through this journey where you have to answer as spontaneously as possible, the objective is to bring out instantaneous emotions, reflections, and thus obtain rich and unique sentences.

Finally, pieces of sentences from these interviews are included in the music.

The band says all their next music will include the voices of their audience.
